Teaching & Learning

PBIS STUDENT REWARDS and INCENTIVES

A major component of our belief behind teaching students appropriate behaviors is that we reward students for behaving well after we've taught them what exactly that looks like. For example, during our elementary assembly to reinforce appropriate behaviors this past Thursday, students were each given a raffle ticket on the way in the door as well as additional raffle tickets for answering questions. Then, at the end of assembly, 10 tickets were drawn and 10 students won the opportunity for lunch and ice cream sandwich with the principal!

At the secondary level, one of the ways we reinforce behavior is through reward activities which take place roughly once monthly. For this, teachers in each grade band, middle school and high school, decide on a couple of behaviors they want to target for reinforcement and then students choose the rewards activity for the month (for example, a free period in the MPR with board and video games).
